THE COMING CONFLICT.

The repeal of the Sherman act by the Wall street combination, which consists of Democrats and Republicans, will influence the State elections east and west a week from next Tuesday. It is claimed at Washington that the passage of the repeal bill will strengthen the Democrats in New York and Massachusetts, but it is admitted that it will weaken the party in Virginia. While there will be large accessions to the Populist ranks in Iowa and Ohio, the Republicans will carry both States. In Kansas, Nebraska and Colorado the elections will be entirely local, and the Populists will beyond question elect their tickets in nearly all the counties in these three States.

It is proposed by the leaders of the free coinage party to hold a great National Silver Convention before the campaign of 1894 is commenced to get the party in battle array for the great Congressional fight. On the subject the Denver News has the following:

"Concerted action covering every congressional district in the United States must be agreed upon. Agitation must be kept red hot, East, West, North and South during the coming prolonged labor depression, and to make this agitation effective a thorough organized movement must be perfected. It should not be forgotten that the approaching struggle is to be between the common people, the workers and producers of the United States, and the combined money kings, of Europe and America. It is folly to underestimate the importance of the coming conflict. Let the preparations for it be timely and thoroughly understood."

The financial question is concluded to be the greatest and gravest issue that has been before the people of the United States since secession was settled by the surrender of General Lee. If the theory of the goldites prevail the country will be on a single standard basis, contraction of the currency will follow, and dull times, low prices and general depression will be the inevitable result. The issue should, therefore, be generally discussed and squarely submitted to the people at the elections next year that the will of the majority may be ascertained and embodied in an act of Congress removing silver.

The Repeal Bill.

Last night's Chronicle says: This bill, which may pass the Senate late today, will have to be transmitted to the House for its concurrence. It differs from the Wilson which passed the House in this, that it has a string attached to it to lead to the belief that the Congress of the United States is still strongly attached to the declaration of the Maine legislator who declared himself in favor of the Neal Dow liquor law, but opposed to its enforcement.

Ex-Congressman Bartine, who is now in Washington, speaking of the situation to a reporter last Wednesday, said: "I see no hope for silver. I expect to see silver go to 40 cents an ounce. There is only one thing to prevent it, and that is the shutting down of all the big silver mines, which will be the case in Nevada. At the same time I think unconditional repeal much better than the compromise proposed, because with that we would have little hope of winning a silver victory. Now we may have such strides toward it in the next election that even as unfavorable an executive as President Cleveland would be compelled to do something for silver."

He Knew the Ropes.

"That darkey the boys caught yesterday," said the Northern visitor, "was certainly a fiery, nervy fellow."

"Yes," casually remarked the colonel, "the Sheriff found him very high-strung this morning."—Atlanta Constitution.
